THE MAYOR of London has been to see work on more than 400 new homes for low cost rent on Greenwich Peninsula and another 229 for shared ownership for first time buyers.

The new homes are among 1300 which will be under construction by the end of the year. London Mayor Boris Johnson came to the royal borough last Friday to mark the milestone in the delivery of 10,000 homes planned for the site.

He helped to start work on a new shared ownership home due for completion next year by development partner Knight Dragon. The new neighbourhood close to The O2 will be part of a new residential, business and leisure district providing thousands of new homes.

The mayor said: "These new homes

Inconvenient to close road to our convenience store

A FEW years ago a Tesco express was built close to where I live on the Royal Arsenal estate in Woolwich. It has been very handy for all the residents here and there is a car park with disabled bays so it's perfect for my mum and dad who are disabled.

A couple of weeks ago I noticed barriers had been put up on the side of the road all the way up and around to Tesco - I believe for pedestrian safety. The road leading to Tesco has now been closed which I think is insane.

Berkeley Homes have spent all that money on the barriers and even a zebra crossing and now the road is closed. My mum and dad can no way walk to Tesco and there is nowhere near for them to park as it is permit holders only.

Today there is now a barrier across the road stopping cars from going to Tesco. All this money has been spend on safety and even road humps but now no cars are allowed.

Berkeley Homes said disabled people can have access between 8am and 6pm but what happens after that if say someone runs out of milk - Are they not allowed to go to the local convenience store?

Kate Coppin, Woolwich

● A spokesperson for Berkeley Homes said: "Due to a new phase of construction works at the new Crossrail station we regrettably have no choice other than to close the road temporarily in order to safeguard the safety of pedestrians. This stretch of the road is often used as a pedestrian route due to current low volumes of traffic, but forms an important entrance for heavy construction traffic for Crossrail during this phase of works."

"Safety is our paramount concern and we will do our utmost to work with Crossrail to keep disruption to a minimum, to which end we hope to remove the barriers at the earliest opportunity. In the meantime we apologise for any inconvenience and appreciate the understanding of all our residents during these works which will ultimately deliver significant benefits to the entire area."

Selfish parkers block school crossing ramps

COULD you please do something about the parking around the Gordon School in Eltham? My wife is wheelchair bound and often can't cross the road as all the ramps are blocked by parents' cars. Please can someone do something about it?

Mr H Howard, Eltham

● A spokesman for the council said: "We are sorry to hear of the problems Mr Howard and his wife have been experiencing as a result of selfish parking near this school. The council is committed to ensuring people with disabilities are able to travel around as easily as possible - which is why crossing ramps have been introduced throughout the royal borough. Schools are keen to act as good neighbours in the communities and we would encourage Mr Howard to make contact with the school to see if they can assist. We work with schools to encourage walking and cycling and to encourage legal and thoughtful parking when parents and carers need to drive. We will arrange more visits from the parking enforcement team and also contact the school to offer them further assistance."

Public invited to visit restored castle again after 25 years

by Dick Townsend-Smith

HISTORIC Severndroog Castle has been officially re-opened after a full-scale restoration.

The Mayor of Royal Greenwich, Cllr Mick Hayes, performed the ceremony on Thursday (October 15), in front of VIP guests.

Described as 'London's greatest folly', the unique 18th Century Grade 2* listed folly tower in the Shooters Hill woodlands was last opened to the public 25 years ago.

The reopening was the result of a labour of love by a group of dedicated enthusiasts who were determined to see it restored to its former glory.

The Severndroog Building Preservation Trust was set up in 2003 by a small group of committed local people who were determined that the castle should be restored with the public given full access.

Views sought on Silvertown tunnel

A PUBLIC opinion exercise has been launched to find out what people think about plans for a new tunnel under the River Thames – and residents in Royal Greenwich are urged to have their say.

The Transport for London (TfL) consultation started on Wednesday (October 15) on detailed plans for a tunnel that would connect Greenwich Peninsula with the Royal Docks.

If approved by the government, work could begin in 2017 and take four years to complete at an estimated cost of around £750 million.

TfL say it would reduce queuing at the Blackwall Tunnel, support new jobs and homes as well as new public transport connections across the river including a DLR extension to Eltham.

They have already consulted people for their views on potential new crossings to the east of Silvertown, at Gallions Reach and Belvedere. While some are keen to alternatives to the Blackwall Tunnel there are concerns about air quality, noise, congestion and charging so everyone is urged to give their views. The capital's population is forecast to grow to 10 million by 2030, with much of this growth in east London, so demand for river crossings will increase.

The public consultation on the Silvertown Tunnel runs until December 19. A report on the findings will be presented to the London mayor in spring and on the consultation website.

New low cost homes on Peninsula on Greenwich Peninsula are testament to the enormous construction now transforming the capital and creating the homes Londoners so desperately need." Royal Greenwich council leader Cllr Denise Hyland, said: "We have worked very hard to secure the quota of affordable homes which are now being built at Greenwich Peninsula, one of the many reasons this area is so important for the borough. It now means people of all backgrounds and situations can access opportunities to live in such a fantastic location. It is great news to see the development of Greenwich Peninsula accelerating in this way.

The regeneration of the area has been a vision the Royal Borough of Greenwich has championed and driven forward from the outset overseeing the transformation of what was a former gasworks on derelict contaminated land - now being put to use providing first class housing, facilities and attractions".

The Country Houses Trust, The Pilgrims Trust and the royal borough.

Heritage manager Dr Laura Allan said: "The tower will once again give access to a beautiful panorama from the refurbished viewing platform which sits atop the circular staircase within the castle.

"Visitors can also explore the building, visit our permanent exhibition and talk to volunteers about the restoration and the history of Severndroog."

The restoration work began in June last year by local contractors Hilton Abbey. There are now plans to use the castle's function room and education facilities for community activities, educational visits, and corporate event hire.

Severndroog Castle was built in 1784 by Lady James of Eltham as a memorial to her husband, Sir William, who died in 1783.

THE TOWN Hall has hoisted the flag to salute an on-shore crew of volunteers who helped to steer the Tall Ships Festival to success.

Around 170 tall ships volunteers have now been recognised and thanked at town hall award ceremonies following the event in September.

As well as a certificate of achievement from the royal borough, they've been presented with t-shirts from festival supporters Sail Training International and they get to keep their distinctive Royal Greenwich red uniforms. The latest group of volunteers went to the town hall on October 8 where they enjoyed a thank you tea with the Mayor Cllr Mick Hayes after the presentations.

The volunteers were a vital element in the success of the festival which attracted 1.1m people to Greenwich over the five-day regatta from September 5-9.

They were based at the four main venues of the event at Maritime Greenwich, Royal Arsenal Woolwich, Greenwich Peninsula and Wood Wharf at Canary Wharf where they provided written and verbal information for visitors and directed them to the ships, other landmark attractions and essential facilities such as banks, public toilets, restaurants and cafes.

by Hilary Bryan

The volunteers had been recruited by the Volunteer Centre Greenwich and underwent two days of training on a range of subject areas including customer service skills.

Among those recognised were 70 people with special skills and an interest in sailing who acted as ship liaison officers attending to the needs of the tall ships' crews.

For volunteer Faye Donohoe it has been a life-changing experience clinching her a new job with the Thames Clippers river services.

Faye, an events management student at Greenwich University worked alongside Thames Clippers staff on a special 'circle line' boat service set up for the regatta.

She said: "I was asked by a member of staff at Thames Clippers where I normally work. I told them I was at uni but looking for a part-time job and she informed me there was a job available at Thames Clippers and that I should apply. I applied, had an interview and was offered a job. I started last week and have completed my first two shifts with the company.

"All the staff at Thames Clippers are very welcoming and supportive and I'm so glad that volunteering with the VCG gave me the opportunity that has lead me in to this role."

● Staff and volunteers will be promoting the work of Volunteers Centre Greenwich, and its new headquarters at Equitable House, Woolwich, from a stall in General Gordon Square from 10am to 12pm this Friday (October 24).

● More information on volunteering opportunities in Greenwich at www.greenwichvolunteers.org.uk or call 020 8853 1331.

Crown Woods now an academy

CROWN Woods School in Eltham is celebrating becoming an academy. Its new status means it will now be self-governing and run as a non-profit charitable trust.

The school will now be known as the Stationers' Crown Woods Academy, sponsored by the Worshipful Company of Stationers and Newspaper Makers. There will be no changes to the Crown Woods uniform or the way the students are grouped into 'small schools'.

Principal Michael Murphy said: "Working in partnership with other academies will help us to continue to raise standards while also benefitting from the investment and support from the Stationers' Company."

The school got its name because it is built upon the land that was formerly King Henry VIII's hunting grounds, hence 'Crown Woods'.

First known as Crown Woods School, it reopened in 2011 in new £50 million buildings as Crown Woods College. It is structured into four 'home schools', all of which are housed in separate buildings. Three of the schools are for pupils aged 11 to 16 and pupils are allocated to the schools based on ability, skills and interests. The fourth school is a sixth form centre for 16 to 18-year-old students.

It was previously administered by the Royal Borough of Greenwich, which will continue to run the admissions for new students.

Young women

School conference throws spotlight

STUDENTS from Eltham Hill School organised a conference to put the spotlight on the issues and challenges faced by young women in the UK and around the world.

They invited other female students from Plumstead Manor, the Harris Academy Greenwich, Thomas Tallis and John Roan to go along and discuss concerns such as domestic violence, female genital mutilation (FGM), body image and the challenges faced by girls globally to get an education.

The October 13 conference, called Girl Rising, encouraged students to become 'agents of change' and return to their schools and raise awareness of the issues in their own school communities.

Speakers included Cllr Denise Hyland, the leader of the council, who talked about why more women were needed in politics, and Gillian Palmer, director of the borough's children's services, who spoke about domestic violence. Cllr Hyland said: "I was delighted to attend the conference. It was such an inspiration for me to see so many intelligent and vibrant young women engaging on a variety of issues which affect us all. It was a wonderful event and I feel privileged to have been able to attend."

Other speakers included Lucy-Anne Holmes, founder of the 'No More Page

Charlton Manor success at school catering 'Oscars'

THERE was double success on a plate for Royal Greenwich at a school catering awards ceremony last week.

Charlton Manor headteacher Tim Baker won the School Food Plan award at the EduCatering Awards while Discovery School GSI Plus chef Theraza Tray was a finalist and runner up for the category of catering manager at primary schools.

The pair were recognised in last Monday's awards, sponsored by food producers and retailers, which recognise schools or organisations that have excelled in the school meals sector.

Award nominations were open to individuals working within local authorities and contract catering companies.

Judges looked for examples of how they have worked towards the three main elements of the plan which focus on the role of the headteacher in leading the charge for change, child-centred activities and taking a whole school approach to food.

Charlton Manor is supported by the royal borough's catering provider GS Plus by providing a Food For Life Gold Standard menu which reflects the ethos of cooking good healthy meals that help young learners to reach their full academic attainment.

Charlton Manor headteacher Tim said: "Judges considered all that we do with food in school, including using it as a vehicle to deliver our curriculum in a creative and innovative way. We are delighted to have been recognised for our outstanding practice and commitment to developing children's awareness of food

on the issues facing young women

TALKING POINTS: Cllr Denise Hyland with Sadia Balogun and Indigo Burgin from Year 11, above, and (main picture, far left), with teachers and pupils

3' campaign, Ladi Dariya from the Commonwealth Education League Fund, and Ghada al-Nasser from Women for Refugee Women.

Eltham Hill's Principal, Madeleine Griffin, said: "We are extremely proud of the amazing work our students have done for this conference. The event raised awareness to the important issues girls around the world face every day. It was a successful event which saw many students from other Greenwich schools attend.

"The day also saw the announcement of Malala Yousafzai win the 2014 Nobel Peace Prize for her campaigning for education for girls."

DISH OF THE DAY: Charlton Manor pupils serve each other as part of a healthy eating project growing, cookery and making healthy food choices. It is a great achievement for our pupils and staff and we are all feeling really proud."

Discovery school chef Theraza was already a regional finalist in the Highly Commended Award from the Local Authority Catering Association (LACA) earlier this year.

Councillor John Fahy, the borough's cabinet member for children's services, said: "We are delighted that Tim, Theraza and GS Plus have been highlighted in these awards - it reflects the excellent food standards provided to our young learners. It means they not only enjoy their lunch time meals but also learn about healthy diets and lifestyles."

COME AND TRY: Crafts and sports are among activities on offer

Help is at hand for foster carers

ARE you caring for someone else's child? If so, and if it is a private fostering arrangement, you could be entitled to advice and support from the royal borough.

Private fostering is an arrangement that is made without involving the council, where the child or young person under the age of 16, or under 18 if disabled, is looked after for more than 28 days by someone other than a parent or close relative.

The council has a legal duty to ensure the welfare of all children in private fostering.

Anyone planning to foster privately must inform the council at least six weeks before starting. Where it is an emergency, the local authority must be informed within 48 hours.

Once told of a private fostering arrangement, the council will arrange a home visit to check the care of the child and assess if the carer is suitable.

The council will also make regular visits and make sure that the carer has the help and support that is needed.

Although parents are responsible for paying the private foster carer, the council can help him or her when making benefit claims.

One person who does private fostering is Olabisi Raheem from Charlton, who looks after her great niece.

She said: "The support provided to me by Royal Greenwich children's services has been extremely helpful."

"They have carried out important safety checks and did an assessment of me and my family. They visit me and my great niece regularly to make sure that she is doing well and I have all I need to care for her appropriately."

"They contributed to the court report in support of my application for a residence order and supported me throughout the court process.

"They are always there to assist us and make sure that the fostering arrangement is perfect and done in the correct way."

"This has put me at peace of mind, and allowed my great niece to also feel free in my home."

"Social workers are doing a wonderful job, ensuring that both children and carers are protected by the law."

"The perception that some communities have of them is inaccurate and unwarranted."

Giant creatures up for auction Focus on mental health and wellbeing

OVER the summer Corelli Creature Carnival has put on a public arts trail exhibition at 18 sites in Greenwich.

The animals included a giant owl, a pig, a cow and a shire horse.

On Thursday (Oct 23), 32 of the uniquely designed sculptures will be on sale by auction at the college at 6.30pm, with viewing from 5.30pm.

The money raised will go towards future creative projects for Corelli College and a quarter of all proceeds will go to Compassion in World Farming.

The sculptures were created by established artists, teachers and students.

Each location was highlighted on a specially produced trail map to mark the occasion.

Corelli students and local primary schools including Henwick, Eglinton and Cardwell, along with Charlton Park Academy, took part in the project.

All 32 sculptures came together for the first time when they were displayed in a grand unveiling at the Cutty Sark (pictured).

THERE were over 20 information stalls in General Gordon Square, Woolwich, for World Mental Health Day on October 10. The stalls were offered wellbeing and self-help activities and advice from organisations such as Greenwich Mind and Oxleas NHS Foundation.

The roadshow also marked the official opening of the Greenwich Recovery College, a mental health centre designed to support Greenwich residents with mental health issues.

STAFF and supporters of Greenwich Welcare hosted an open day to showcase the services available to the community earlier this month. Welcare, the family support charity serving vulnerable families in South London and East Surrey opened its doors to the public on October 9. It was a chance for other voluntary organisations and the public to gain more of an understanding of what Welcare is doing in the community. The event was organised by the Friends of Greenwich Welcare, a dedicated group of local supporters and volunteers. The event allowed those interested in supporting and working with vulnerable children and families to network and share information. Visitors included the Mayor of Greenwich, Councillor Mick Hayes (pictured with visitors) and the Bishop of Woolwich, The Rt Revd Michael Ipgrave. The mayor congratulated Welcare for the services they have provided in the Greenwich. Greenwich Welcare has been active since 1992 and is based in the heart of the Nightingale Vale estate, Woolwich. Centre manager at Nightingale Vale, Nicola Holder said: "Welcare recognises the impact that difficulties faced by families, such as poverty, isolation, separation, disability and poor education, has on children. By supporting parents and family networks, we strive to give children the best possible start in life and help them reach their full potential."

Business brainstormers

Students show their talents and ideas to employers

by Dick Townsend-Smith

MORE than 400 students brainstormed for new business ideas in an Apprentice-style workshop.

The students from Greenwich Community College were given a unique opportunity to develop their new business ideas alongside business experts and employers.

The 16-18 year olds spent three days taking part in an event organised by social enterprise education specialists Working Knowledge. On hand to provide support and advice were volunteers from a range of local employers, including Greenwich Leisure Ltd and Charlton Athletic Community Trust.

They worked in teams to create new products and services, developing business plans in hands-on workshops designed to improve their employability skills.

Business student Tainia said: "Today has changed my attitude towards my career and I now feel more confident working in a team with people I didn't know. The business volunteers have helped me think outside of the box with my business ideas."

Alex Snelling, HR director for The Bodyshop, was one of the employers taking part. He said: "The students have been amazing, not only because of the ideas they come up with but how quick they are to take information on board. For me it's been a really good reminder that while we already work with university students at The Bodyshop, there is an awful lot of talent out there within further education as well."

Gillian Jones, head of learning at the community college, said: "Taking part in the event gave our students a fantastic opportunity to meet employers within the industries they aspire to be in."

Family learning support

FAMILIES are encouraged to learn together as part of Family Learning Festival events. The local campaign was due to be launched last Saturday (Oct 18) at Greenwich Community College's Plumstead Centre. The idea is to inspire families to take on exciting new learning opportunities. And visitors got the chance to sample taster sessions in various activities from hand-stitching to languages and digital art. There was also information and advice to support family learning. The GCC's Family Learning programme is just getting started and runs until February 15 next year. As part of the programme, GCC Adult and Community Learning tutors will be helping families access learning in partnership with local children's centres, schools and community centres. ● Further details at www.gcc.ac.uk or contact the Families Information Outreach Service on 020 8921 6921.

Big Mac's expansion plans

BURGER giant McDonald's is investing heavily in Woolwich, with new jobs and apprenticeships.

The chain is celebrating its 40th year in Britain and the branch in Powis Street – the first one in the UK – has been having a £850,000 facelift. It is taking on new staff and is due to open on Thursday (October 23). Franchise-holder Taimoor Sheikh (pictured on the right with staff) has owned the Powis Street franchise for six years and said: "We have been carrying out a major refurbishment to bring it into the 21st century. We have been listening to our customers to see what they want. What will be different will be self-ordering kiosks for meals, and new toilets and counters, and we will be making iPads available for customers, particularly for students and children. There will be more jobs and we are recruiting another 30 staff. "It's the way to do business and go forward, and we are providing more convenient ways to pay, and offering food of an even better quality. We are doing it because of the demographic changes that are coming to the area, particularly with Crossrail on the way and Woolwich is a good place to invest in."

Your new McDonald's, freshly prepared.

Every burger, wrap or sandwich you order will be freshly prepared for you. There is a new way to order at our kiosks, or you can order at the counter as usual.

There are also new interactive tablets for you to play games and browse online while you enjoy your food.

Fireworks

The royal borough is supporting the annual fireworks display on November 1 from 8pm. It marks the end of a week-long event, which is expected to thrill the thousands of people expected. The council will offer a warm welcome with many staying open later and providing special offers.

SAYING IT WITH FLOWERS: Chrissi Su is offering 10% off plants if GT is mentioned at Passionflower florists

THE circus is coming to town, and the nine-day visit will end with a bang when the stunning annual fireworks display lights up the sky on Blackheath.

Around 100,000 people are expected at the spectacular display on Saturday, November 1.

This year the royal borough is supporting the event and some of the concessions on the heath will be operated by Greenwich businesses. The council is also involved in the planning and traffic mangement of the event.

In the run-up to it, the internationally-acclaimed Circus Berlin will be thrilling crowds on the common when up to 30 tightrope walkers, clowns and acrobats show their skills in the Big Top from Wednesday October 22 to 30.

The week of fun means a big boost for businesses around the Royal Standard area. Shops and cafes are planning to open late, and many will have special offers. The council is encouraging local people to go along, explore the range of independent businesses around Old Dover Road and the Blackheath Standard, have fun and snap up some bargains.

The 60-seat Scullery Café on Vanbrugh Park is holding a special sausage-and-mash night on the Saturday, with two sittings, one at 6.30pm and the other at 9pm. Owner Colin Woolven said: "I would advise people to book in advance on 020 8858 2244. I think it going to be a fantastic event, and very good for The Standard area, which is already looking like it is an up-and-coming place. I've been here six months and business is growing. We've got lots of regular customers already, and I hope the celebrations will bring more customers in."

Passionflower florists in Old Dover Road normally closes at 5.30pm, but owner Chrissi Su hopes to open until 7pm. She said: "I think it will be a good idea because it will give people the chance to look at our Christmas stock and browse, and see what we have in store. It will be a good opportunity for people who work full time, who will be able to come and see what we have."

Susan Donnelly, who runs Blackheath Pet Supplies in Old Dover Road is already planning to take part in Small Business Saturday on December 6, with a table outside the shop giving away samples of pet food. She said: "If more businesses get involved with the Royal Standard late nights, we will get involved as well. I will offer a 10 per cent discount on natural calming products for pets to help them during the fireworks."

Lucia Levoci, owner of the Moca café an Italian Delicatessen on Old Dover Road, said: "I'd like to be involved as well. We will open late if the buses are diverted via us, because it will mean we will get more people in, and that's good for our business."

Amanda Keyzers, who runs the Blackheath Cooks cookery school and cookware store on Old Dover Road, said: "We love it when there are big events in Blackheath. It's great for locals and newcomers to discover the Standard where we have a beautiful parade of independent shops - a rarity in London these days. I am happy to offer 10 per cent discount to all Greenwich Time readers if they mention the paper when booking classes over the phone, and on stock in the shop. We will be having a late evening on November 10 to celebrate the start of the season with a guest chef preparing free canapes and mulled wine."

Royal Greenwich council leader Denise Hyland said: "We are pleased to be working in partnership with Lewisham Council on organising this year's event and keen that our support will benefit local traders."

How to find the lights fantastic

BLACKHEATH fireworks is one of the biggest – and one of the very few free – displays in South East England attracting people from all over London and beyond with as many as 100,000 people expected. 2014 marks the 409th anniversary of the infamous Gunpowder Plot in 1605, when Guy Fawkes and fellow plotters tried to blow up the Houses of Parliament and assassinate King James I of England and VI of Scotland. This year, as always, visitors to Blackheath, can expect a special evening as they watch the famous fireworks display. Visitors to the fireworks are urged to go by public transport as there will be a number of road closures and restrictions around Blackheath all day on November 1.

● Visit Transport for London at www.tfl.gov.uk for the latest information

Organisers are also urging visitors to note the following:

● Do not take any fireworks along including sparkers and sky lanterns
● Do not take your dog to the heath and keep all pets indoors
● For further information on the Blackheath Fireworks, go to www.lewisham.gov.uk/fireworks

WOMEN ONLY: the Players as the Osiris Players

Doubly happy

THEY put on hundreds of plays in thousands of locations, in halls, schools and workers' canteens. They drip fed culture-starved Britain as World War Two effervesced. Imogen Stubbs tells the story of the Osiris Players in her play We Happy Few. Based on a true story of a group of women who formed a 'girls only' theatre company which toured the plays of Shakespeare during wartime. The play now produced by Charlton's Alexandra Players recounts their scrimping, their saving, their "plays for the people" and their travelling on horses and drays. Never larger than seven, members played multiple parts and built their own props. They kept Shakespeare alive at the height of the bombing and this memorial, We Happy Few, is long overdue.

The Alexandra Players ably step up to the challenge. Producing three shows a year, the talent is all local and, director Jackie Hartley notes, they are "looking for new blood". Dating back to the 50s, the players - which include Janet Denne, Louise Gaul, Janet Sweet, Jessica Pentney, George Allonby, and Keith Hartley - practise straight after work but this band of actors are far removed from the am dram stereotype and are being supported by the Royal Shakespeare Company for this production. The play climaxes with the Saint Crispin's Day speech from Henry V - hence the title - a parallel to VE Day in Europe. So go and enjoy this most vibrant of troupes, this happiest of bands, these brothers in arms. And to bastardise the Great Bard himself, be not accurs'd you were not there!

THE Giant in Jack and the Beanstalk will be a huge part of this year's annual pantomime at Greenwich Theatre.

The part is often under used, says writer-director Andrew Pollard, who has taken part for the past nine years, many times as the Dame.

"I've seen it a few times where you don't actually see the giant and I think that's wrong," said Andrew, who plays Dame Trott in the show that has been extended already to meet demand.

"You've got to get the giant right. You build him up and you've got to have something quite spectacular - and we do."

The giant - 11ft from the waist up - is part of one of Andrew's favourite pantos. He said: "I think it's one of the strongest of the five big stories because it has real adventure to it, someone climbing into the sky and the giant, of course."

"I don't think anyone else looks at panto quite as closely as we do to make things funnier or quirkier. It's a small cast so the ensemble is very important and so is the music."

"Greenwich is where I've spent Christmas for nine years and it's a brilliant place to be," said Andrew, 47.

"Everybody's heart and soul are in the show, including everyone behind the scenes."

"There's a real family feeling to it and I think people relate to that. People come back year on year, some booking a year in advance."

Andrew has been in Coronation Street, Emmerdale and Hollyoaks and has recently played Phileas Fogg in Around the World in Eighty Days.

The panto will run from Thursday, November 20, to Sunday, January 11, 2015, with 77 performances.

DEEP AND MEANINGFUL: players from the Dumbshow company in a scene from The Pearl

Pearl of wisdom on teens

A PERFORMANCE dedicated to young teens is on the programme of events at Greenwich Theatre for the Family Arts Festival.

The play aimed at young people - and particularly teenagers from the age of 12 or 13 - is The Pearl, adapted from John Steinbeck's novella.

It's presented by the Dumbshow company on October 26 (6pm) and 27 (7.30pm) as part of a nine-week tour.

It's one of two events organised for a local celebration of the national celebration of family-themed arts events.

The second festival show at Greenwich is for three-year-olds and older, The Queen's Knickers, presented by the Southbank Centre and the egg. Thursday (2pm and 4pm) and Friday, October 30 and 31 (11am and 2pm). The theatre wanted the festival to cater for families in the widest sense - involving a real mix of parents, grandparents and older children, not just two adults and two young children. The theatre's executive director James Haddrell said: "There's not a lot of theatre for that age group. It's a big gap for this industry and a big gap for young people, and we feel passionately that something needs to be done about it."

The Dumbshow ensemble was established in 2007 by artistic director Michael Bryher, who directs The Pearl and plays the lead character, impoverished pearl diver Kino.

"We decided it was a story that had ideas we wanted to engage with," said Michael. "Steinbeck initially wrote the story as a film so it already had a sense of drama and character to it in a visual sense. The Pearl is certainly not for younger children, we have suggested 12 plus as it deals with quite adult issues." The Crooms Hill theatre will be transformed for the Family Arts Festival.

"Last year we created a huge graffiti wall and this year we'll be participating in the Big Draw Festival which is about encouraging families to draw. The festival also helps to signpost Christmas as we prepare for Jack and the Beanstalk," said James.

Tickets for The Pearl are £16, cons £11. Tickets for The Queen's Knickers, are £11; children and cons £8.50 (includes £1 booking fees). Bookings 020 8858 7755, visit www.greenwichtheatre.org.uk

Pupils experience legacy

PUPILS from Christ Church Primary School, Greenwich, were part of the first group of more than 700 children to enjoy exclusive access to expert coaching at London 2012 legacy venues.

Youngsters in Years 3 and 4 enjoyed coaching in Quicksticks – a fun four-a-side taster for hockey, and mini tennis.

The sites were Lee Valley VeloPark and Lee Valley Hockey and Tennis Centre, which hosted their first schools festivals.

Cycling, tennis and hockey were offered on the first of four days.

The event was hosted by Lee Valley

Regional Park Authority which owns and runs both venues, and is part of a long-standing programme giving schoolchildren across the capital and further afield opportunities to enjoy sport for free in inspirational surroundings.

Lee Valley Hockey and Tennis Centre, where the wheelchair tennis took place during the Paralympic Games, is open to everyone. It has six external and four internal tennis courts alongside two international standard hockey pitches.

LET'S PLAY: Staff and pupils celebrate with Cllr John Fahy, deputy leader of the royal borough, at the opening

Olympic hero sets another first

Sprinter opens first Sport England-funded 'primary spaces' facility

by Ian Lamont

CHILDREN at Woodhill Primary School are the first in England to have a new multi-use games area funded through Sport England's primary spaces project.

The school, in Woolwich, received a £30,000 grant to transform part of the playground to a sports area, which was opened by Olympic 400m gold medallist Christine Ohuruogu on Wednesday.

Sport England is transforming facilities in 601 schools, in its £18 million National Lottery-funded investment project.

School funds matched the grant to provide an all-weather area in which children can now enjoy two hours of quality physical education a week, instead of having to share the playground and indoor facilities in rotation.

It can be used for football, hockey, tag rugby, basketball and netball and there is also a climbing wall set up nearby.

Year 6 pupils were the first to try out the facilities. Destiny Okoro, 10, said: "It is very exciting to have a new experience, to have a new play area on which to have some fun and learn new things."

Adele Pomo, 10, added: "Some people slip over when we do sport, but now they don't hurt themselves."

Ellen MacDonald, a member of Greenwich Royals who wants to be a swimmer in the Olympics, said: "It's got an anti-slip surface so it's not like falling over on concrete. It felt really important to be trusted to go on it. I love running round doing sports."

Christine Ohuruogu told GT: "This is a very safe and fun surface for kids to play on - I've not seen any child just around and they are all engaged.

"I didn't have anything like this at school. We had a concrete playground and a bit of grass but it was only used in summer, or the school hall. It's really great for kids to be able to play without fear of hurting themselves. It's a worthwhile investment in an inner city area where there is not much space. It's important kids are taking part in sport and enjoying it."

Kate O'Connor, head of school, said the opening was a "momentous occasion" to see the playground transformed to be able to deliver two hours of quality physical education per child each week.

Sport England's director of community sport Mike Diaper said: "When we were launching this fund, we knew there were currently many primary schools that had little or no suitable outdoor space for PE or sport. By giving children the space to take part in PE and play sport from an early age, we can help them establish a lifelong sporting habit that will also help them lead to living healthy lifestyles."

The school sits in the ward of Cllr John Fahy, the royal borough's deputy leader and cabinet member for children's services. He added: "This is an extremely exciting opportunity for the borough, being the first of 601 similar facilities."

"When we set out in 2010 to embrace the Olympics we wanted to ensure there was a legacy in the future. I am sure there are some Olympians of the future playing here this afternoon."

Cultures brought together

Association beat Eltham Phoenix 11-10 in a shoot-out after their match finished in a draw. Teams included one from Greenwich Islamic Centre.

Dr Michael Seeraj, head of equality and diversity at Charlton Athletic Community Trust, said: "We carried out surveys on the day asking questions such as did you speak to people from different cultural backgrounds you wouldn't normally and have you gained more trust in people in Woolwich."

"The response was overwhelmingly positive. We feel it has been a huge success in terms of bringing people from different sections of society together."

The junior winners, The Lions, lost to Long Lane in the group stages before taking their revenge in the final to take home an X Box as a team prize and Love to Shop vouchers individually.

The runners-up received vouchers for meals at Nandos.

The seniors won the same prizes, with the addition of two season tickets for Charlton Athletic for the winners.

The trophies will be re-presented on November 29 at Charlton Athletic's home game against Ipswich Town, when all participants will be given free tickets.

Woolwich United is running three free dance classes during October: Dance at the Tramshed on Mondays from 10-11.15am; dance and movement in the Woolwich Common Community Centre on Thursdays from 11am to noon; and at the Waterfront Leisure Centre on Fridays from 9.45am-11am (not October 31).

PENALTIES were needed to separate the teams in the adult section of the Unity Cup, while the junior winners Woolwich Lions took their title with a 3-0 win over Long Lane.

The two free competitions were part of the Woolwich United sports project which has the aim of fostering good relations between different communities.

Run jointly by Charlton Athletic Community Trust and Race & Equality (CARE) Partnership, with the royal borough and Greenwich Leisure Limited, the project was the only London one to gain funding from the Department for Communities and Local Government, working with Sport England.

The project will run seven activities, including football, basketball and dance which have already started, in Woolwich for anyone over the age of 14.

Twelve teams took part in the six-a-side competition. The junior contest was for 14 to 17-year-olds, including Greenwich Community College and the Police Cadets. In the senior event, Greenwich Gambian
